Why we chose to work with Peru?

During the past 15 years, the Peruvian government system has now been stable, featuring legality and legal enforcement. Over the same period, the economy has been growing steadily at around 5.5% on average and extreme poverty went down to 10% from over 30% of the population. Yet there are 1.6 million children working under the age of 14, there is a widespread informal economy.

Peru has a wide diversity of landscapes including the Atacama Desert, the Andean highlands and the rainforest covering the whole northeast of the country. Peru is also the headwater of the Amazon River.

Nearly half of the population of currently 30 million has indigenous ancestors. Indigenous peoples, their culture and history are generally being respected.

There are huge challenges and opportunities in the fields of water, infrastructure, energy and wildlife protection. Due to its varied geography and the concentration of the urban population along the pacific coast, the country is highly affected by climate change.

5e Consultancy will focus on the improvement of the lives of the rural poor by harnessing natural resources, conserving nature and renewable energy. We will grant access to finance and assist landowners in the acquisition of land titles. Combining the indigenous wisdom in the traditional management of natural resources with advanced technology, we apply the holistic system of Impactivation, thereby creating rural centers of excellence in socio-economic development.

Adding a bit more detailed of the history. (Asle Frydenlund)

Michael and I was invited to work in a project called Allpauahy Mishana, a conservation area of approx 140k Ha, we did a thorough job preparing for the project from start but we could not raise the needed capital. The project is still available and we will try to get it back on our schedule when we can show economical strength.

We have built up a good relation with important members of the Peruvian authorities and governmental organizations during the past 10 years, contacts we now will start to work with as soon as 5e Consultancy Peru LT is established in October.
